The Ships Report "Present."

When we entered the war in 1917 the first fact we had to face was that we were on one side of the Atlantic and the scene of war was on the other. We should succeed or fail according as we were able to bridge that ocean and keep it bridged. We must have ships for our men, ships for our food, ships for our munitions—ships and always more ships. The constant limit upon our participation in war was the tonnage at our disposal, whether it was tonnage created or begged, borrowed or stolen.

So the record of the United States shipping board, as presented in its second annual report, is one of the war epics, which should have a place on the shelf beside the epic of the army and that of the navy. The latter might protect the ships, the former might use them for its purpose, but the ships themselves had first to be provided.

The story of the shipping board is one of which Americans may be proud, because it expresses two phases of the American genius: the ability to meet an emergency and the capacity for productive enterprise on the broadest scale. The steady rise of the production curves, for keels laid, hulls launched, ships completed, might fairly represent the curve of America's war effort. The raking and scraping of ships from the far ends of the earth, from Scandinavia and Siam, from Japan and Uruguay, is expression of the spirit that faced and defied both the ocean's space and the U-boat.

Other war annals are ended. The annals of the shipping board and the American merchant marine will continue. "The board recommends that the program for the construction of vessels as modified to meet peace conditions should be carried through and should be extended." That is the best part.—Boston Globe.

Helps Reduce Insecticide Prices.

Chemical advice has been given by the United States department of agriculture to the food administration, and much valuable data have been supplied to it relative to manufacturers engaged in making certain types of insecticides and the importance or nonimportance of various insecticidal materials. A representative of the insecticide and fungicide board has attended several conferences between the food administration and manufacturers and has been able to supply data of value. As a result of the activities of the food administration, assisted by the department, the price of arsenic asked by the producer has been reduced from 12 to 16 cents to 9 cents for carload lots and 9½ cents for shipments less than a carload. This presumably will lead to a reduction in the price of Paris green, lead arsenate, and other arsenical insecticides to the consumer.

Court Buys Lime Crusher for Farmers' Use.

When the fiscal court of Allen county, Ky., went with the county agent to see a field demonstration where limestone had made red clover grow abundantly where before clover had been a failure, the favor of the court was gained to the extent that when the court met in regular session an appropriation was voted for the purchase of a limestone crusher. The crusher cost $2,500. It is a portable outfit, and for eight months of the year the county agent, by order of the fiscal court, has control of the machine. It is taken around from community to community to crush the natural limestone rock for agricultural purposes. This work is done at cost for the farmers. In the other four months of the year the crusher is used by the county on road work.
